BLOOD AND SKIN HUMORS.

CUTICURA REMEDIES for the Treatment of Blood and Skin and Scalp Humors. When of Scrofulous, Cancerous, Syphilitic origin, the CUTICURA RESOLVENT is the principal remedy, and if there are at the same time Ulcers, Sores or other External Affections, then the CUTICURA, assisted by the CUTICURA SOAP, must be used externally. If the disease is of the Skin and Scalp, the principal remedy will then be the CUTICURA, with the CUTICURA SOAP, and such use of the Resolvent as is suggested by the following conditions: In all skin and Scalp Diseases, when the skin is hot and dry, the blood feverish, the liver torpid, the bowels constipated, or when the virus of Scrofula or poison of Mercury is known to lurk in the system, or when the Constitution has been shattered by Malarial and Anti-Periodic Fevers and Debilitating Diseases, always take the Resolvent while using the Cuticura. A cure thus made will be permanent and satisfactory.

Last May a physician called my disease Eczema Rodent,—spots appeared on my hands, head and face, eyes became much inflamed and granulated, causing at length impaired

Internal and external remedies were prescribed by a leading physician for six months, was then introduced to another, and a consultation of several leading physicians was had, when a definite plan was decided upon, but all

After following advice for four months without any permanent cure, I bought two bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, two boxes of Cuticura, and some Soar, and can testify with great pleasure to the effect they have had in my case, in eight days being nearly cured.

The physicians pronounced my case the most aggravated one that has ever come under their experience and practice.

I recommend and highly indorse the Cuticura Remedies. Yours truly.

SALT RHEUM

Messrs, Weeks & Potter.—I commenced to use your Cuticea last July. Have only used one large and one small box, and one bottle of the Resolvent. My face and head and some parts of my body were amost raw. My head was covered with scabs and sores, and my suf-fering was fearful.

was covered with scabs and sores, and my suffering was fearful.

I had tried everything I had heard of in the East and West. My case was considered a very bad one. One very skillful physician said he would rather not treat it, and some of them think now I am only cured temporarily. I think not, for I have not a particle of Salt Kheum about me, and my case is considered wonderful. My case has been the means of selling a great many of your Cuticura Remedies in this part of the country. Respectfully yours,

Clear Grit.

Robert Coilyer at Cooper Union. The Rev. Robert Collyer, of the church of the Messiah, delivered his lecture on "Clear Grit" in the great hall of Cooper Institute Saturday evening. The subject was not new, but he told many new stories was not new, but he told many new stories and gave fresh illustrations of what he believes are the principles of a true life. He some bread and roast a piece of beef, and

pose to speak of it to-night, is the best that there is in a man, blossoming into the best he can do in as sweet and true a fashion as a rose blossoms on a bush or a bird sings or a woman which could never give way except in a true way and for a good reason. It is the power to walk barefoot over the flints that lie along the right line of life rather than to go through green pastures and by still waters that deflect it. It is the power to say no to what may seem to be a power to say no to what may seem to be a multitude of angels if they want to council cult music." Said Dr. Johnson, "Yes; sel you away from your downright loyalty and I wish it was so difficult that it was to instant duty. There is a false and a true grit, as there is in all great and true things in creation, and we need to know the one from the other as the prime condition of being true ourselves. It is never base or mean either in its nature or tendencies. But in order that it shall come to be a genuine part of our life it must have its root in a certain austerity and self-denial. After the power to save yourself comes the power to give yourself—the power to help others, no matter what it costs you, when the thing faces you as a clear duty. When a man has these two things in his life, the power to save himself and the power to give himself, he sees all at once something to be done that he ought to do, and he never stops to count the cost, but as we say, he pitches right in and does it. Having made an exposition of what I believe to be the principle, I want to make a few simple applications that will go right home to your own lives every day, for we can see every day what kind of grit we are made of, and we can show it by these tests that I speak of: (1) To do a good nonest day's work; (2) to have a good home and take care of it; (3) to lose no time, but go ahead and see to these things while the bloom of our life is in our hearts, and (4) to be content. And I put the power to do an honest day's work first, because eight-and-twenty forge, as well as such light as comes to me from my present profession, convinces me beyond all question that this lies at the root of all true living. But it is just what great numbers of men try to dodge, as if they felt that this thing means to get the most money possible for the least work possible, and very often the poorest, too; that which comes through what we call good luck. Some young men begin their life bewildered by the opportunities that open before them to make a fortune. There is no such deadly need to do something solid and steady the moment they are out of school as there is in poorer countries, and so they coquette with the chances that seem as thick as blackberries. To get along, they try this, and then that, and then wait for something to turn up. Now, we are never to forget that Mr. Micawber, after going on his luck for all those years, waiting for something to turn up, had to strip at last and turn something up for himself. He failed entirely to do anything until he began to do something in dead earnest; and every dollar he made when he did begin to succeed was a draft honestly indorsed by his brain and muscle, manhood. So waiting for something to turn up is the greatest mistake, I think, that a young man can make who wants to undertook to make a steam engine. He succeeded so far as you could see in making a very capital engine indeed. The lever lifted to a charm, the piston answered exactly, the wheels turned beautifully. nothing could be better so far; but when it came to be fairly tried there was one drawback—the moment you tackled anything to it, it stood stock still. On its own hook it would work beautifully, turn its own wheels faultlessly; but the moment you wanted it to lift a pound beside, then lever and piston and wheels struck work, and as it was made in an age and a country in which to do nothing was to be counted as and dug out of the solid gold of his own

a gentleman, the thing was called Evans's gentlemanly engine. Now, who doesn't know numbers of young men whose actions exactly resemble that engine? What little they do for themselves. You can find no fault so far with their motion, and they are polished to perfection, especially in those parts that are blister on their hands to save their souls. friends, the county poorhouse, or, the saddest of all things, ladies and gentlemen, I who could work their fingers to the bone have seen them go down, down, until they to defend the land, are not now willing to get to Washington to hunt for an office that they cannot fill andeat the bread they a man can give of his want of grit-to do nothing in particular or to come as near as he can to his own idea of a gentleman by dodging everything that is not easy and The question, What makes a gentleman? is not an easy one to answer, but between such a man as that and a good blacksmith or ploughman, or wood-chopper, who puts all his manhood into his work, there can like this had been hidden away once in a be no comparison. The hard-handed mechanic is beyond all telling the truer gentleman, as well as the better man. And or in a home down in Virginia where in the good time coming everybody will say so, that has a right to be anybody. Honest work well done is the first thing in clear grit. That does not mean, however, merely to work hard, because to to work hard at anything. I had a shopmate once when I was a young man who was just as good a blacksmith when he

heart good to look at them.

home; and that, of course, presupposes that indispensable preliminary to all good homes, a good wife and a good husband; because I sincerely believe that there are a good many men who marry but don't have a wife, and a great many women who marry but don't get a husband, and they never find it out until the mistake is beyond all remedy, except that of going to Chicago to get a divorce. And the way that comes about is that a great many young women are only anxious to get all boil a potatoe, and darn a stocking, and make a shirt and iron one, and keep a home smelling as sweet as wild roses and shining like a new silver dollar; but how to do tatting and draw wonderful shepherdesses with pink eyes, and talk impossible French, and in such a way, I notice, in a tree. It is that noble quality in a man that Frenchmen themselves cannot understand it, and discourse music so difficult as to make you remember Johnson's grim joke, for is is related of him that having been taken to a great concert he showed > impossible. Now that is what a great many call an cept those that are indispensable to a good wife the young woman gets, and then she gets married. And the young man very often gets an education that is just about as delectable to fit him for a husband. We call it "sowing his wild oats." The worse of it I dare not tell; it turns him away from all that is domestic and delicate and unspeakably sacred in a good home, and teaches him how to play billiards instead of reading books, to prefer cards to all other pictures, and to be more familiar with the inside of the hells of this city than the church. Then he goes into society scented and curled; meets the young woman with all the accomplishments; believes her to be the exception to all her sex in angelic excellence; gives her what heart he has left, and so the match is made and they are wedded wife and husband so long as they both will live.

That, in the vast majority of instances is like a wedding we had once in Yorkshire. As the man came out of church with his bride he met an old companion, who said: "There, lad, I wish thee much joy; thou's gotten to t'end of all thy trouble." It was very good to be assured of that, and the bridegroom went on his way rejoicing; but by and by he found he had got married without getting a wife. It was a bad job; and so when he met his old companion on the street one day he said with a very long face: "I thought thou told me as I came out of Gruiseley church that I'd gotten t'end of all me trouble." "I did tell thee so," said his old friend, quietly, "but I didn't tell thee A good home can no more bloom out of such a life as that than a damask rose can bloom on an iceberg. It is a tyrant and a slave, or else two slaves. It is two strings full of nothing but harsh discords constantly under the bow of the daily life. I was once at a meeting in which a noble woman's rights advocate was speaking about the essential equality of the sexes

when, to my astonishment she looked right st me and said: "Robert Collyer,

I hope when you marry a man and woman. you do not ask the woman to say that she will obey the man." I thought for a moment of telling that story that illustrates well what a woman will say the man wants, of get woman who declared she would never promise to obey-would get round it by some means. And the minister who was to marry them heard of it. The word came in his service, and the woman followed the service until she came to the word, and then she was seized with show his grit.

Mr. Smiles, in one of his books, tells a story of a man in the last century who begin again; and she broke down just in the same place. "We will try once more," he said, for ministers are very patient; but once more she broke down, and then he said: "Madam, it is clear you cannot go through with the service, and I cannot marry you," but that instant she lifted her voice and said "obey" with an emphasis that almost took his breath. I thought of telling that story; but what I did say was "Madam, I never do ask any woman to say that she will obey the man, and let the man go free, because one of the best women I ever knew said she would, and never did obey, beyond what was fair and right." But chance and change make no difference on the golden wedding day; the glory of the maiden at twenty cannot be seen by reason of the glory which excels in the good old wife of seventy.

The next thing I consider indispensable to a good home is a house full of children. brass and steel, but they would not raise a | The figures show that the American who has been longest on the soil is losing Their one motto is to take care of number ground, and the new-comer from all the one; and in this world they often come to world over is taking the place. Men who one of three things-the charity of their were willing to die for their country are give sons and daughters to people it. In my great old mother-land the homes are cannot carn. This is the first grand proof full of children. I speak for that which ought to give any man courage when I say that wherever the sin of keeping the home empty or one-half full may hide itself, it is the most fatal blow that any man can strike either at his own soul or the soul of his country. From it is not received the soul of his first the first took, fixtures and good will of JACOB country. For it is not merely what he may take from the measure of life, but what he may take from its hope and joy. What would have been the result if a sin secret chamber in Stratford-upon-Avon; or in the old hut where Burns was born : George Washington was born; or in that poor cabin in Kentucky where a child was baptized by the name of Abraham Lincoln; or in a thousand homes besides that were out of sight then as ours are now, but work hard honestly is more essential than are now lighted and set on the shining summits of the world. Then another thing is that a man should make sure as soon as he can that did his best as any man need be, but it this is as true as gospel, and conduct himseems to me now that he was the most in- self accordingly. It is a great mistake in genious fellow at getting up any sort of a a young man to think that he can wait as lie in iron that I ever saw. The second thing I said, is a good jumped at him ten years ago if he had said the word; she wanted him to say so dreadfully, and almost broke her heart because he didn't. I think the wisest thing I ever did was to marry on 75 cents a day and find myself, before I was twenty-four. Very sad is the fate of the man who hears the voice say in his Eden, at twenty-two, "Here is the woman I have made for thee," and replies, "I cannot take her yet for ten or twelve years to come." While a man is saving money he is wasting life. Dr. Stark, the register-general of Scotland, has shown from statistics that from the age of twenty to twenty-five twice as many bachelors die as married men. I was appalled when I read this, at the risk I had run in staying single until I was twentyfour. The average for single women is a little better, and it ought to be, because they are not the greatest sinners, for they cannot always do as they like. So, young man, if you have been waiting, show your grit and go right away and pop the question, and this lecture will prove the best sermon you ever heard in your life. It is both the curse and blessing of our American life that we are never quite in my hands and limbs, causing constant irricontent. We all expect to go somewhere before we die, and have a better time when we get there than we can have at and I wish it was so difficult that it was home. The bane of our life is discontent. We say we will work so long, and then we will enjoy ourselves. But we find it just education. All the accomplishments, ex- as Thackeray has expressed it. "When I was a boy," he said, "I wanted some taffy —it was a shilling—I hadn't one. When I was a man, I had a shilling, but I didn't want any taffy. But I say not one word against that splendid discontent that all the time makes man strike for something better. I like this idea that every boy born in America dreams of being president. No man has any right to be content not to be his best and not to do better to-morrow than he is doing to-day. But all that will come by keeping close to a manly and dutiful life. While we are going steadily along to whatever future awaits us, the grandest thing we can do is to feel sure that what we are doing for a day's work, with all that we do besides, is just the most blessed thing so tar as we can do and that we are very likely hav-ing the best time that can ever come to Covered With Scabs and Sores. our life; that this work and wife and home and children, all they are and all they mean, beats the world. The saddest thing in our life is our discontent when we ought to be most contented. It is our birthright to get the good of life as we go along, in these simple and pure things that to all true man and womanhood are like rain and sunshine to an apple tree. But when we will not believe this, and dream that the best of our life is to come when we have made our fortune, then we sell our birthright for a mess of pottage; but worse than Esau, the pottage gives us the dyspepsia, and then we lose the good of birthright and pottage together.
